CAMPAIGNING IN CONTEMPORARY SOCIETY HISTORIES AND POLICIES

University of Birmingham
13 November 2009

The Voluntary Action History Society was established in 1991 to advance the historical understanding of charitable organisations amongst both academics and those working in the sector. Today its main activities are its seminar series held at the Institute of Historical Research in London and a biannual conference.

In order to build upon an impressive number of postgraduate participants at the 2008 VAHS conference, a postgraduate sub-committee was established in late 2008. Members to date have included:

Dr Elma Brenner, University of Cambridge
Dr Georgina Brewis, University of East London
George Campbell Gosling, Oxford Brookes University
Elizabeth Harvey, UCL
Lucy Hewitt, University of Edinburgh
Christopher Moores, University of Birmingham
Stephen Soanes, University of Warwick

The core activity of this group is a series of workshops. At these workshops postgraduate and early career researchers give papers, not presenting research findings, but raising problems and issues they have come across in their work. These are then the basis of a roundtable discussion led by senior scholars in their field.

This format was trialled in February 2009, with a workshop on the theme of 'Medicine and Charity in History'. On the basis of this successful event, an application was submitted to the Economic History Society for a grant of £1,830 to fund a series of workshops over the 2009/2010 academic year. The Birmingham workshop was the first of this new series.
